On July 8th and 9th, 2020, A two-day state-level webinar on 'Competitive Examination and Preparation and Guidance' was organized by the Department of Political Science of Dr. M. K. Umathe College, Nagpur

The keynote speaker in the first session of that webinar was Mrs. Priyanka Dhonge. She gave a good Suggestion on how to prepare for the competitive exam. She suggested competitors should be fully aware of the syllabus for the exam. Tenth, twelfth and NCRT books should be studied in depth.

She also suggested Importance on school books for general knowledge. The Indian Constitution can be studied while political science students are pursuing degree courses. The postgraduate course may include in-depth study of comparative governance and politics. Syllabus up to 12th standard is also useful for Marathi grammar and English grammar. It is also necessary to study mathematics, history, economics. While doing this preparation, there is also a exam of net, set. Madam Explained the format of the question paper of MPSC. She also emphasized on-time planning for each question. She proposed, while studying, the students stressed need to boost their morale.

The Chairperson of the second session was, Dr. Pravin Bhagdikar. He also Enlightened to the speakers talk. When 2020 began, no one might have envisaged that it will be marred by unprecedented health crises that will bring the world to a standstill, overwhelm the health care systems, and lead to the suspension of cross-border travel for several months.

Over the months, the Covid-19, which is believed to have originated from Wuhan city of China, has caused millions of deaths and destruction globally. With over 81 million positive cases worldwide and more than 1.77 million deaths, economies pushed back to minus growth rates. Even the most developed nations failed to cope with the requirement of ICUs, ventilators, and medicines.

Diplomatic relations and multilateral systems between the countries were also affected by the pandemic as priorities of governments shifted to health care and evacuating their citizens from Covid-19-affected regions.

With a majority of countries turning inward to tackle the pandemic at home, India was one of the few countries which understood that multilateral collaboration is the need of the hour to come to grips with the mammoth problem.

Although Prime Minister Narendra Modi did not take a single foreign trip for the first time since taking office in 2014, he held several virtual summits with leaders in Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Australia, Luxembourg, European Union, Uzbekistan, and Denmark.

He also made extensive phone calls to keep in touch with world leaders in the absence of in-person meetings. He used telephonic conversations to express condolences to some and assure medical supplies to many. He also congratulated those who assumed office in the middle of the pandemic.

India pushed for the resurrection of old multilateral forums like SAARC and NAM to coordinate regional preparation and chart out plans to contain the pandemic. New Delhi had organized a video conference with the member states of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC) in March. It offered USD10 million for a voluntary Emergency Fund to be used by the SAARC nations in case of scarcity of essentials.

In May, PM Modi participated in the online Summit of Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) Contact Group, held to discuss the response to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic. He also attended several virtual multilateral summits including G20, India-ASEAN Summit, and BRICS. India also hosted the Shanghai Cooperation Organisation's (SCO) Council of heads of government summit in November.

A foreign affairs expert said that India's foreign policy has found new ways of engaging with the world through virtual summits and it has been very proactive in engaging at top levels with the world during the pandemic.

Harsh V Pant, a professor at King's College London, believes that there has been a considerable push from the Indian government that India should not lose its momentum in its global engagement.

"India's foreign policy has found new ways of engaging the world, a lot of it through virtual summits. India has been very proactive in engaging at top levels with the world. You have a lot of Summit-level engagement. India diplomats have been travelling also. I think there has been a considerable push that India should not lose its momentum in its global engagement and that's very important. They are finding new ways of engaging. One of the ways is finding a new mechanism. The other is to find new opportunities for projecting leadership. Prime Minister Modi was very proactive, he mobilizes SAARC, he mobilizes G 20," Pant told ANI.

On the 9th, the keynote speaker and guide was Sunil Sonawane. His subjects were competitive examinations and Panchayat system. While guiding the students, he suggested that the planning should be done in coordination with the subject and time of the examination. Students should focus more on study, he suggested to grow the general knowledge by reading the article in the current paper, the headline and use the various books currently available in the market. He explained the historical background while discussing the Panchayat system. Gram Panchayats had a place in India during the British rule. Explained the provisions of 1909, 1919, 1935 Act. After independence, Balwantrao Mehta explained the provisions of the committee. He also explained the provisions regarding local self-government as per the 73rd and 74th Amendments.
